

TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

As one person in a school that is part of a city that is a state, which belongs to a country, on part of a planet shared by billions it is hard to believe that I, one person, can make a difference. Can I, a thirteen year old girl, with nothing in grasp change the world? Can I make a difference? Can the people around me too, change the world? Some say yes. Others say no. I say it all depends. It depends on what we change, how we do it, why we do it, and but of course how much we will it. Anyone can make something happen. Harriett Tubman changed the course of history and she was but one person. The incident of 9/11 was horrible, but caused by one person. Yes, people participated to make it take place, but one person thought of it. One person said it. We can make a difference. I can make a difference. For good or worse it can still happen. It happens every day.

It seems impossible, at least to me, but it can be done. I can make a difference now. Any one can too. I can join organizations that help clean the environment. I can volunteer at a hospital, a shelter or even at home. I can help out now and begin to make a difference though it may not be that big it will still matter. I plan to volunteer at the Downey city library when I am 14 and when I am 15 I plan to join the explorers. Both ways I can make a difference. As I get older I will volunteer in more places to expand the difference I will make. Right now I am trying to join Volunteers, a group of kids my age who volunteer a certain amount of time a week. I can start now.

When I get older, however, I will be focusing on me and my career. I will help out when I can, but that will not be for years. I plan to become a lawyer so I can help people. I will be doing something I love while helping others which is the best help you can give. I will also donate money I earn to organizations that need to be funded. I will do my part then too. Hopefully by then many people are helping out as well. I hope what ever I do I will make a difference in a good way.

Making a difference is possible and I will continue to try and do so for a long while now. I must be patient and understanding, but I can not wait. Any one can make a difference to. It all depends on if you try. Let us change the world one person at a time. We know it is possible. After all it has been done before.
